

THE EDITOR

Julia Doust is the founder, writer, and photographer behind The European Compass, an independent English-language publication covering European food, wine, and cultural travel. Yorkshire-born, she has lived in France since 2003 and holds dual British-French nationality. Before founding the publication, she spent nearly two decades building and running a French hospitality business, growing it to 21 rooms across three sites, following an earlier career in chemical engineering and project management. Bilingual in English and French, she writes, photographs, and edits every piece of coverage herself.

COVERAGE FORMATS

Coverage is built to last. Articles, video, and podcast episodes continue reaching new readers through search long after publication, not the ephemeral reach of a single social post.

- Long-form articles 1,500 to 2,500 words, evergreen, ranking in search
- YouTube long-form, destination and hotel content
- Podcast fortnightly, food as a lens on European culture
- Social media Instagram, Facebook, Threads, supporting the above rather than standalone
